FRY TIES LIBERATOR ON DEMOCRATIC BALLOT

Will Have to Draw for The Nomination Before The County Commissioners

OTHER DEMO. RESULTS

The Democrats in Bristol Borough went to the polls yesterday and nominated a full ticket. There was no opposition in the party.

In the fifth ward, Roy F. Fry and Richard Winslow, the present Republican sitting members of borough council, and successful nominees of their party, received substantial votes on the Democratic ballot. Two Democratic councilmen were to be nominated in this district, and the slated Democratic candidates were Frank Gilardi and Angelo Liberatore. Gilardi polled 18 votes and Liberatore 17. Fry tied Liberatore with 17 votes, while Winslow polled 14.

This will necessitate Liberatore and Fry drawing lots before the County Commissioners for the nomination for borough council on the Democratic ticket in the fifth ward.

The Democratic candidates for county offices polled the following vote in Bristol: First Ward, second precinct, district attorney, Webster S. Achey, 1; prothonotary, Frederick S. Erdman, 1; director of the poor, Thomas J. Brennan, 1; jury commissioner, Kenward S. Ahlum, 1.

It will be possible to enroll more beginning pupils who will become six years of age during the months of December and January, in the following buildings: Jefferson avenue, Washington street, Beaver street, Wood street and Bath street.

No more first-grade pupils can be taken into the Harriman building but arrangement will be made to accommodate them in one of the other buildings if the parents desire to send them to the building assigned.

Registration of beginners will close September 30, 1933.

Louis B. Girtton walked away with the Republican nomination for tax collector held here yesterday. Girtton carried every voting district in the borough, and his majority over his opponent James A. Fine was 1021.

Dennis Roche and Paul Barrett received the Republican nomination for councilmen from the fourth ward. The names of Roche and Barrett were written in on the Republican ballot, as there were no regularly slated candidates listed to fill the vacancies created by the death of the late Patrick J. Barrett, and the resignation of Joseph P. Duffy who is now postmaster.

In the first precinct of the first ward, not a single Democratic ballot was cast.

Quite a number of ballots throughout the borough were destroyed due to the fact that the voter neglected to detach the corner. In the second ward the last voter was deprived of the ballot due to the fact that the clock in the polling place was fast, and it was after eight o'clock by the time-place when the voter arrived. It was ruled however that the voting place had opened by the clock, and therefore should close by the clock.

Chief Burgess Anderson received a very substantial vote throughout the borough, his total being 1393. Totals cast for the other candidates were as follows: School director, Stanford K. Runyan, 1114; Louise Fabian, 1039; George Molden, 1084. Town council—first ward, Dr. J. Fred Wagner, 300; John S. Williams, 318; second ward, Armand V. Morris, 195; William Warner, 214; third ward, Jacob C. Schmidt, Sr., 226; Evan B. Vandegrift, 170; fourth ward, Dennis Roche, 13; Paul Barrett, one; fifth ward, Roy Fry, 203; Richard Winslow, 184; sixth ward, Frank Pfeifer, 228; Edgar J. Spencer, 229; borough auditor, William G. Buckman, 1077.

The vote cast for the county ticket in the various wards in Bristol borough follows: First ward, first precinct, district attorney, Arthur M. Eastburn, 175; second precinct, 166; second ward, 231; third ward, 174; fourth ward, first precinct, 58; second precinct, 67; fifth ward, 206; sixth ward, first precinct, 161; second precinct, 71.

Prothonotary, Oscar P. Wiggins, first ward, 1st precinct, 139; 2nd precinct, 133; second ward, 140; third ward, 149; fourth ward, first precinct, 39; second precinct, 52; fifth ward,

ANOTHER REPORT OUT

A surprising conclusion is reached by Arthur R. Tebbutt of the Harvard graduate school of business administration.

Professor Tebbutt was not included in the brain trust formed to help get the new deal in operation. He, nevertheless, as is characteristic of professors, has been doing a little investigating of his own. He has made known the results in a report entitled "The Behavior of Consumption in Business Depression."

He sought to find out how much consumption had slumped during the depression. In pursuing his study he conducted a national survey of the leading retailers of the United States.

After analyzing the data collected, he reached the conclusion that the slump in consumption has not exceeded 10 per cent. In other words, the people have consumed 90 per cent as much food, clothing and other essential products as they did during the pre-depression years. This, in his opinion, shows that the depression was not due mainly to less consumption but to an international price war leading to lower prices, a 54 per cent decrease in purchases of raw material by manufacturers, curtailment of production with accompanying decrease in jobs and lowered public purchasing power.

The latter factor seems a little out of line with the professor's general conclusion, but apparent inconsistencies frequently are found in the reports of economists and others dealing with the depression. They may serve a good purpose by indicating that no one knows, with anything approaching accuracy, just what caused the depression or any sure and quick cure for it.

Studies and surveys by experts will continue to be made, though.

Professor Tebbutt's report differs, in its conclusions, from others that have been made, but it is difficult to escape the conclusion that much of his data represents guesswork.

BYRD'S SECOND TRIP

That Admiral Byrd, planning a second trip into Antarctica, intends to make a searching exploration of that little known area, is indicated by some of the equipment he will take with him.

In addition to an airplane, he will carry motor sleds, tractors and 150 dogs. He expects to do "ten times as much flying this time as before," he said in announcing the early start of his expedition.

It is to be expected that some interesting discoveries will be made and a great deal of scientific data collected.

The expedition is made possible by private contributions. Its backers are performing a valuable public service, the extent of which can not yet be known. Admiral Byrd, who ended a two-years' stay in the Antarctic about four years ago, is a veteran explorer, and the expedition under his direction will be in capable hands.

Back from college on vacation, Tommy proved a sartorial sensation in his Thorndyke sport togs.

SYNOPSIS
Thomas Jefferson Randolph... now a great football prospect at famous Thorndyke University... was born of humble parents, Mom and Pop, in a little Middle West factory town where he won early renown as a brilliant high school back, so much so that the great eastern college had lured him to its swanky halls. He's back home on Christmas vacation in freshman year and his studied efforts to improve his family's manners already have caused another row between Pop and Uncle Louie.

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Things went along more quietly after that. Tommy didn't come home for Easter vacation because it was too far away but said he was going to the home of a rich friend. Mom sent his laundry box to school anyhow with some Easter candy; and Pop, who had saved up his penny-ante winnings, put a five-dollar bill in with the laundry. After that Mom caught him looking on the mantle every night when he came home from work but there was no letter. Mom felt sorry for him and said Tommy was probably busy with examinations.

"Sure," Pop said, "he has to go through a lot of that red tape."

But Pop got his five dollars' worth of bragging about how much it cost to send a boy through such an expensive school. Mom told him to keep his mouth shut about that as Tommy had told them not to mention it at all about how his way was paid. It was all right, he said, except that people wouldn't understand. Mom didn't understand, either; and when Mrs. Johnson asked one day, and the other women perked their ears up, how expensive it must be, Mom just slid over the question without answering it and said that she supposed it would be worth it when Tommy got out of school and took one of the fine jobs that would be offered him.

"What kind of jobs, Mis' Randolph?" Mrs. Johnson asked.

"Oh, all kinds," Mom said airily, "birds of a feather flock together and when Tommy gets ready he'll take the same kind of a job the millionaires do."

"That'll be pretty soft for you," Mrs. Flannigan said.

"I suppose," Mom answered, "y'see, Tommy is always talking about the fine things he's going to buy me when he gets rich."

And Tommy was; he was going to buy her a new brick home up on Cedar Heights, a touring car, a washing machine, an electric sweeper and a radio.

Mrs. Johnson turned to Mrs. Farrell. "And what is your Joie going to buy you, Mis' Farrell?"

"My Joie," said Mrs. Farrell, "don't go around blowing his bugle."

"Some people," Mom answered, "don't have a bugle to blow."

Mrs. Farrell had no answer to that but picked up her basket and left the store. And Mrs. Johnson said to Mom: "You give it to her right—that little bump on a log of hers will never amount to a row of pins. I asked my man what a chemist was and do you know what he told me? He said a chemist was just a high-toned name for a fellow who tests bootleg whisky."

When Tommy came home for the summer vacation the whole town knew about it in less than no time; news traveled up and down Circle Street. He was in the pool room which also had a lunch counter in front and you could walk along the sidewalk and see inside. Looking inside one could see Tommy in there talking to a crowd around him. Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Farrell happened to be on their way back from paying the gas bill cash so they could get the ten per cent discount.

"My lands," Mrs. Johnson said, "look at him!"

"Must be gettin' childish," Mrs. Farrell said, "I see he's wearin' short pants again."

Tommy was attired in long, white linen knickers, a sleeveless gray sweater, white shirt, white stockings and black and white shoes.

"What kind of a getup is that, anyhow?"

Mrs. Farrell guessed it must be that golf they had over to Smithville at the country club. Mrs. Farrell always read the Society Page and kept a fairly accurate account of the going-on throughout the county.

"That golf," she explained, "is a bag of foolishness. When we had the district convention over to the Country Club I saw them playing it. There ain't no sense to it at all, Mis' Johnson. Just a lot of big men in getups like his'n trying to knock a little white ball around."

"Why do they do it?"

"Lands sakes, don't ask me. If it was up to me I'd say they was all crazy as bedbugs. Ain't that just the kind of fiddlesticks that Tommy Randolph would put his time in on?"

Mrs. Johnson nodded. "And I suppose she'll say it's all right."

"Huh!" Mrs. Farrell sniffed, "she'll say that it's what all the millionaires do. I'm tellin' you, Mis' Johnson, he won't be worth powder to blow him up and it'll be nobody's fault but her's. You see."

"Anything he does is perfect," Mrs. Johnson confirmed.

That afternoon at the store Mrs. Johnson put it up to Mom before all the other women.

"I see," she said, "that your Tommy is back."

"Yes," Mom said proudly.

"That was some fancy getup he had on," Mrs. Johnson continued. "Quite a dude, I'd say."

"Yes," Mrs. Flannigan added, "I heard about it—all lit up like a bell church, my husband said. Some sport you got in the family, Mis' Randolph."

Mom took her time. "Yes," she said, "but of course when in Rome you must do like the Romans do, you know."

Mrs. Flannigan and Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Farrell all looked at each other, wondering what this talk was.

"Yes," Mrs. Johnson said, laughing a little, "you do; only what's Rome got to do with it, Mis' Randolph?"

Mom explained grandly. "You see Tommy has been invited to play golf over at the Smithville Country Club; and naturally he has to dress like they do."

Mrs. Flannigan nodded. Mom went on: "A body don't have to be small town all his life just because everybody else is."

Mom ordered her pork chops as though nothing had happened.

Mrs. Farrell could not keep still, though, she had to say what was on her mind.

"I suppose," she said, "the town ain't big enough for him any more—I suppose he's too good for the people he was brought up with."

Mom smiled sweetly. "Oh no, Mis' Farrell, it ain't that at all. I ain't saying Tommy is any better than your Joie or Mis' Flannigan's Myrtle just because he goes to school with the millionaires—only you see he has to go around with them; he can't turn them down just because they weren't born and brought up here."

"That's true," Mrs. Johnson nodded.

"Of course he's got to be quite a dresser since he went away although Tommy always did have real nice taste," Mom continued, "but it's like I say—when you fly with fine birds you must wear fine plumes."

WOMEN'S TENNIS MATCHES ARE GOTTEN UNDER WAY

The Women's Tennis Tournament which got under way yesterday morning created a lot of interest and excitement. A large gallery was present to witness the initial matches.

The first match was between Mollie Eastburn and Louise Descamps and resulted in a victory for Mrs. Eastburn by the score 6-1, 6-1. It proved a very interesting match and although Mrs. Eastburn, as the first seeded player, was expected to win, yet Miss Descamps played a very nice game. Mrs. Eastburn plays with skill and ease and has the poise of a seasoned player.

The next match between Mollie Brace and Gertrude McGee was really a contest and furnished the most excitement of the day. Miss Brace won the first set 6-2; but encountered stiff opposition in the second set and after a struggle won by the score 6-3. It was a spectacular match and very interesting to those looking on.

Louise Lawrence, who is the second seeded player, won her first match in the second bracket, when she met Ruth Walker. It was a spirited contest and although Miss Walker put up a stiff battle, she was unable to score and Miss Lawrence won 6-0, 6-0. The last match was between Irene Paulus and Miriam Scott. Miss Paulus won by the score, 6-0, 6-0. The score does not really tell the true story, as it was a hotly contested match from beginning to finish, and often evoked the applause of the spectators.

Today at 11 a. m. Elizabeth Scott and Peggy Pope meet on the Elks' Court in the first round, first bracket. At 5:30 p. m. Thursday, Marie Rufe and Elnor Kallenbach play their first match in the first round, first bracket. At the same time and place, Emma Anthony and Phyllis Kallenbach play their initial match in the first round, second bracket.

When these matches are completed the following will appear in next round; Mollie Eastburn and winner of Rufe-Kallenbach match. Mollie Brace and the winner of the Scott-Pope match. Louise Lawrence and Irene Paulus. Veronica Dugan who drew a bye will meet the winner of the Anthony-Kallenbach match. Following these matches the winners will enter the quarter-finals.

If the weather permits every effort will be made to complete the tournament by the end of the week. It is hoped that the finals can be played either Saturday afternoon or Sunday. The public is cordially invited to attend these matches, and by their presence, give encouragement to the effort that is being made to develop an interest in tennis among the young ladies of Bristol.

FIRST PARTY OF SERIES

The Ways and Means Committee of Lily Rebekah Lodge will hold the first card party of a series of ten tonight, the proceeds to be used for charity. The committee in charge has on display an unusual array of prizes consisting of a double electric sandwich toaster, clothes-hamper, large mirror, glassware, two card tables, lamps, potted plants and gifts too numerous to mention. The public is invited.

MEETING TONIGHT

A meeting of Official Board, Harriman M. E. Church, will immediately follow the mid-week prayer service this evening. All members are urged to attend.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD TO MEET

The Sunday School board meeting of Harriman M. E. Church, in the basement of the church, will be held tomorrow evening at eight o'clock. All teachers and officers of the board are asked to be present.

IN NEW JERSEY CAPITAL

Mrs. Sara McCoy, 632 Beaver street, is spending several weeks with Mrs. Robert Gibson, Trenton, N. J.

Armed Diplomacy in Revolt-Torn Cuba

Three interesting pictures from turbulent Cuba, where, it is reported a new revolt is brewing. At left Santiago Alvarez and Ysmael Seijas, heads of the student "brain trust" that directs the policies of President Grau San Martin. Automatic rifles indicate they do not put all their trust in brains. Top right, four of the Cuban Army officers besieged in Nacional Hotel, Havana, prepare a meal in the kitchen. Lower, a company of armed students of Havana University ready to cope with trouble.

Three Bold Buccaneers

By BURNLEY

LAST spring a large percentage of the baseball critics predicted that the Pittsburgh Pirates would cop the gonfalon this season. The acquisition of Freddie Lindstrom from the Giants was expected to make the Pirates almost unbeatable in the National League race.

On paper, such predictions sounded very logical. But shortly after the season got under way the Pirates' craft ran into a few squalls, which made them look like anything but pennant winners.

Skipper "Gawge" Gibson became the target for the angry Pittsburgh fans, who had expected the Pirates to shoot right up to the top and stay there. Skipper Gibson could only say that it wasn't his fault that Lindstrom failed to hit up to expectations and that Lloyd Waner went into a terrible batting slump, not to mention the decline in pitching effectiveness of Meine and Swetonic.

But late this season the Buccaneers started to click in the manner expected of them, and began to roll up a formidable string of victories.

The brilliant play of good old Pie Traynor was an important factor in this late season drive of the Corsairs. Traynor has spent his entire major league career with the Pirates, dating back to 1920, and he is naturally a great favorite with the fans at Forbes Field. Pie has been mentioned as a likely candidate for the job of Pirate leader if George Gibson is handed his walking papers at the end of the current season.

One of the brightest young stars in the big leagues is now sparking in the Pirates' line-up—Floyd Vaughan, great young shortstop. Vaughan has shown that he can hit big league pitching, and all season long he has been a dangerous man at the plate. So keen a judge as Bill Terry of the Giants insists that this youngster is the "next" great player of the league. Right now, at twenty-three, only Dick Bartell tops him as a shortstop in the Heydler loop.

In reviewing the Pirates' gallant fight, one must not overlook the work of the veteran Paul Waner, always a valuable man both at the plate and in the outer pasture. Poisson Paul has not hit quite up to his usual standard this season, but he is still a power at the plate and is flashing all his accustomed brilliance in the field.
